5 reasons private school vouchers would hurt students

1 Private school vouchers drain money from public schools

Private school vouchers take scarce money from public schools – that serve 92% of Texas students – and give it to private school operators who are not accountable to taxpayers. Public schools stand to lose about $10,000 per student in state and local funding. But the cost of running those schools remains. The lights have to stay on.

2 Funding private school vouchers means using taxpayer dollars to fund discrimination

Private schools are not required to serve all students, so they can deny admission, enrollment and educational services at their discretion. This includes students with disabilities, emergent bilingual students, students of different religions and diverse identities.

3 Voucher programs don't improve academic outcomes

Studies show that students who use vouchers to attend private school don't perform any better than their public school peers. On average, students attending private schools with vouchers did less well on tests relative to their similar peers in public schools.

The best way to strengthen public schools is to strengthen public schools!

4 Voucher programs subsidize affluent students already attending private schools

Most vouchers programs fall far short of covering the full cost of a private school education. The national average tuition for private school is more than $12,000. This means that families are often left to cover additional tuition costs making the real beneficiaries of voucher programs families who can already afford to pay the difference between the voucher and the actual cost of tuition. Only wealthy families end up enjoying the subsidy of a private voucher.

5 Private schools lack state accountability for academic and financial performance

Private schools have almost complete autonomy for how they operate, including how they manage their finances and what they are required to disclose to parents and the public. Private schools are not required to administer the STAAR, to be rated under the state's A-F school accountability system, or to transparently account for their funds and spending.

It is the state's responsibility to provide excellent, well-funded public schools for all students.
